Subject: Chat with Clark Robinson

me: howdy me: I'm going to reactivate Project PM after the rally me: Anonymous is getting too bogged down in infighting me: and I've managed to recruit a lot of the people who are uncomfortable with the drama and some of the tactics me: including some older people Clark: I have not seen anything from Campbell in a long time, although I believe he has been travelling Clark: I think Project PM needs leadership in the programming effort me: yes, that's no problem Clark: I imagine you have met some amazingly talented programming-wizards through your recent contacts me: absolutely me: and I've managed to acquire the loyalty of many of the better ones, the ones who are here to work Clark: you also appear to have good working relationships with figures like Biella, and the reporters at Ars Technica and the Tech Herald who might be able to help with the public relations once you get re-established in Project PM Clark: I forget the names of the Ars and TH guys who wrote such good pieces me: I'm having lunch with Biella on Friday me: and talk to Steve Ragan regularly me: as well as Ian Cobain of Guardian me: working with them on Metal Gear Clark: yeah, Ragan is one of them me: one sec, on skype with a guy who's working with his father on some of this and who are joining Project PM Clark: got to go, contractor just got here to do some work on this place-------that is good news about Project PM me: great, talk to you soon
